

Figuring out what you DONT love, so you can figure out what you DO love

GUIDE: Using the information that you have filled in above, answer the questions below. This reflection and analysis will help guide and direct you to identify what you don't love about your current style. You can then use this information to identify your personal design style with confidence and start decorating with intention!

Are there any recurring themes in the "reason I don't love this item" category (column 2)?

Are there any common colours that you do not like in your home? If so, which ones?

Which room in your home had the most items that you do not love?

Which room in your home had the least items that you do not love?

What general conclusions can you draw from the room that had the most items on this list? Are there specific reasons why you don't love so many items in this room? (This could include colours, patterns, design styles, size, etc.)

What general conclusions can you draw from the room that had the least amount of items on this list? Are there specific reasons why you love so many items in this room? If so, what are those reasons?

What is the most common reason that is holding you back from making changes to these items?

Which items on the list can you purge immediately?

Can you sell any of these items to make money back? If so, which ones?

REFLECTION: What are three things you learned about what your style is NOT? Once you have identified colours, patterns, or trends that are "so not you", you can use this information throughout the next steps of this process of finding your personal style.

Visit www.featherandoak.co.nz for additional resources in this Finding Your Personal Design Style Series.

FEATHER & OAK
interiors